In Fashion Now

And now we hear that needle-pointed shoes are coming back in fashion. The oval toe had been gaining ground for some months, but at a showing recently of leather industries in New York, a needle - pointed toe and an extremely pointed toe were shown in leathers of various colors. Two leathers of different textures were shown in some displays, and a variety of shades in the different colors.

Pale handbags and pale scarves are in favor—bone or light gray.

A yellow poplin pea-jacket over white strikes a colorful note for sports wear.

Berets are being shown in all of the new hat collections. They are fashioned of luxurious fabrics and have more fullness than those of yesteryear.

Health and Beauty

Home seems a safe enough place until you study the statistics about how many accidents happen in the home. According to a recent survey made by a group of foot doctors, you are safer crossing a busy intersection than you are in your own kitchen.

More than half of all home accidents are ankle sprains and foot injuries resulting from falls off ladders or slipping on waxed floors or stairs.

The study showed that most home accidents occur late in the day, as a result of fatigue. The doctors state that, if women would wear the proper footwear around the home, accidents would be cut down. Rubber soles in contact with wet or highly polished asphalt rubber tile or linoleum floors may skid in the same way rubber tires skid on contact with wet highways. The doctors recommend a low - heeled walking shoe, with a broad heel, flexible leather soles and supporting leather uppers.

It seems that the closed toe is as important in the kitchen as steel-capped safety shoes are in an industrial plant. Many a housewife has suffered a bruised or fractured toe when a can fell off the shelf.

A tired pair of feet can make you look and feel tired all over. Save your high-heeled sandals for an occasion, never wear them for housework. Discard that worn pair of house slippers for the right kind of shoe.

If you have trouble with your arches, try exercise. Pick up marbles with your toes or stand up a bottle with your toes. You will feel the muscles pulling. Make sure your shoes and your stockings fit correctly.

COMMENTS ON SPORTS

By Pete Fritchie

Washington, D. C.- The big surprises of the 1960 baseball season have been the steady winning surge of the Washington Senators in the American League, and of the St. Locis Cardinals in the National.

The Senators, a team which ended in last place in the American League a year ago — 31 games behind the Chicago White Sox, and the Cardinals, a club which ended in seventh place in the National League last season — 16 games behind the league - leading Los Angeles Dodgers — are both playing first division ball and breathing down the necks of the pace-setters in both leagues.

The surprising play of both teams is largely credited to steady pitching, excellent fielding, and solid hitting.

The Redbirds have been sparked by the home-run hitting of third baseman Ken Boyer, steady hitting of first baseman Bill White, left fielder Bob Nieman, and shortstop Daryl Spenceer, the continued valuable services of veteran Stan Musial, and the exceptional pitching performances of starter Larry Jackson and reliever Lindy McDaniel.

The touted stars on the Washington ball club are not to be credited with the success of the team so far this year. Camilo Pascual, the team's top hurler, has been bothered most of the season by a shoulder injury. Harmon Killebrew, last year's American League home run king, has also been hampered with injuries and has failed to produce many home runs when he has been in the lineup.

Roy Sievers, a long time Washington hero, was traded to the White Sox before the season began, Bob Allison, last year's rookie of the year, had a good start, but failed to produce many hits in recent weeks.

With the exception of veteran left fielder Jim Lemon, who has batted out a steady stream of home runs, the Washington Club has been led by a group of rookies, newcomers and former second-stringers. This includes third baseman Reno Berto, catcher Billy Gardner, outfielder Dan Dobbek, and pitchers Chuck Stobbs, Jack Krallick, Hal Woodshick, and Truman Clevenger.

Play safe — drive carefully.
